The Leadville stage pulled out of Webster station one evening after \sup per with 12 "pilgrims" for the city in the clouds Webster was the end of the track and the route from there to the 86 00 Carbon its camp lay over the summit of 3 00 Kenosha mountain, through the north 2 00 un end of the South park and across 1 00 the famous Red hill, a doubly signifi cant title by reason of the color of the soil and the bloody murders committed there by the Moxican bandits, the Espinosos I rom Red hill the road again enters the South park, passes through the old town of Fairplay, once boistercus with the gayety of pioneer gold diggers

Red hill was the danger point on the hrst division of the road Near the sum mit is a little basin, where the road is completely hidden from view on all side. Little guiches lead up to this spot from the South park, affording ev ery opportunity for road agents to reach the place unseen and to likewise make their escape "Pilgrims" for Leadville usually were supplied with money, and a great deal of wealth originally intended for investment in the carbonate camp was turned over to gentlemanly persons who encountered the stage in the little basin on Red hill The individual who sat on the dusty old Concord coach and pulled the ribbons over six bronches between Webster and lamplay was known as Jim I made his acquaintance while we were at din ner in the rough board "cating house" at Webster He was a tall, slim, mus cular man, with a swarthy complexion, dark eyes and a heavy mustache, black as jet from the copious use of dye He were high topped boots, with extremely high hools, and his feet were small and delicately shaped His tronsers were of gorgeous plaid material, but the bottonis were worn juside his boot tops A wide brimmed white slouch hat was cocked rakishly on the side of his head Some gwish jewelry adorned the front of his waistcoat. There was a jaunty air about him which was less pro nonneed by reason of the stiff and awk ward way he carried his arms I attributed this to the natural effect of driving six spirited horses for years over a mountain road

He had formerly been a gentleman of fortune and at one time in his career had amassed a considerable sum of as a novel money in the game of chance known as draw poker. When he was at the beight of his prosperity, another gentleman of fortune, late of Texas, drifted unostentationaly into camp and caused the report to be circulated that he was aching the gentleman of the pain he was suffer ing on that account, and they met in the back room of Uncle Billy Coleman's

Palace of Fashion, on Main street There was a slight controversy in the early part of the game, caused by a re mark of Jim's to the effect that "people from Texas soomed to have more luck prompt attention than a Chinaman "

The gentleman from Texas demurred to this and said there was no such thing as luck in draw poker. The chance teatures of the game, he said, had all been eliminated by the application of to perfection. At the end of six hours Jim's earthly possessions consisted of the suit of clothe, he was wearing Everything else he had owned in the Latest Fads in Mixed and world had passed into the hands of the skillful and scientific gentleman from

He declared that he was better qualified to drive a stage than to pose as a gentleman of fortune ' The superintendent of the stage line, who was present, jocosely offered Jim a job, and the penniless gambler in a NOTICE OF TIME TO PROVE spirit of brivado accopted it and de olared then and there that he would never touch the pisteboards" again as long as he lived

The geutleman from Texas took his departure as uno-tentatiously as he had come, but leaving behind him in his room at the hotel a peculiar wire and elastic contrivance which puzzled the brain of the landlord to determine its use Several persons to whom he ex bibited it declared they had never seen anything like it before, but Jim at once recognized it as a contrivance known as a holdout, by means of which a play-or retained cards in his possession, secreted in his sleeves, which should be in the deck The phenomenal "hands" held by the gentleman from Texas were no longer a mystery to Jim He now understood that it was not "Chinaman's luck" that had beaten him, but this lit tle contrivance, worn under the cloth ing, by the operation of which all ele-ments of chance were eliminated from draw pokor and the game reduced to a "dead moral certainty" It was true, as the gentleman from Texas had remarked, that luck cut no figure in the play

It was a question of skill and science. As Jun was the only person in Fairplay who had anything like an intimate acquaintance with the soientist from Texas, the landlord presented him with the little implement that had worked the former's financial ruin Jim's first

POO BAHS OF TRAVEL

General Passenger Agents and Their Services to the Public.

General passenger agents know what t costs to go anywhere, remain there any length of time and come back by another route. They are, in short, the Pooh Bahs of the realm of travel. Without them the average human being with a burning desire to go somewhere would be as a blind man in a crowded, unfamiliar thoroughfare, as a ship without a rudder or a bird of passage deprived of one of its wings. Think of a world without the ever present "folder" and its impartial, never overdrawn claims of superiority for the line to which it wes its existence. Life in it would indeed be without sufficient compensation. The art of advertising was an unknown quantity until the general passenger agent came upon the scene and with his magic wand transformed dull nothings into bright, realistic somethings. To him the steepest grade and the sharpest curve are of little consequence. Grades A TALE OF TWO NATIONS and curves and distances that have defied the skill of superior and engineer disappear before the morning sunlight Under his manipulation ponds become lakes, hills grow to be mountains, groves expand into forests, rills swell into rivers, and all that has been thought un- guarantee interesting, or worse, suddenly bursts upon the world as a "thing of beauty and a joy forever." Seriously the traveling public owes much, very much, to the general passenger agent. Not only has he brought to notice and to popularity innumerable deserving localities that otherwise would have "blushed unseen," but he has made it possible to visit these, as well as others longer and better known, with an expenditure of time and exertion and expense insignificant in its proportions when compared with that of years gove by He is ever watchful of the paods and whims and eccentricities of travelers and quick to provide for their every requirement. He is an intermediary be tween the traveler and the railway or steamship company, ever ready to serve the interests of both without prejudice to either and never shrinking from any proper obligation In the early days of coming and going by rail and steamer he was not known Now he is one of the most important factors in the whole warp and woof of travel, and for him the future is full of added powers and increasing honors — Magazine of Travel.

his person said seek revenge upon the unsuspecting miners in the guleh, but he remembered that he had hired him self to the stage company and forsworn gambling. He was a man of his word, and a stage driver he became. It was a monotonous life until the road agents began to pay frequent visits to the line, and Jim liked it. The only thing that disturbed his screenty was the recollection of the gentleman from Texas. If he could but once meet that scientist face to face, life would take on new charms for him.

I had a seat beside Jim on the Leadville coach, and as the horses crawled slowly up the grade of Kenosha mountain, proparatory to a wild dash down the other side into the South park, I remarked to him that it was going to be a pleasant night. He replied that you never could tell much about nights in The very best of meteorological predictions were likely to fail in a country so thickly infested with gentlemen of the road.

I expressed a desire to have a view of Red hill as we crossed that famous elevation and wondered if the moon would be down before we got there. Jim vonchsafed the information that the had known of people's appetite for scen-ery being permanently destroyed by gazing on Red hill by moonlight.

I was sound asleep with my head on Jim's shoulder when he undged me and "We're going up Red hill now. Help yourself to the scenery, and if you've got any valuables about you you'd better hide them. We're liable to see more things than scenery."

Then the horses came to a sudden stop, and Jim and I were looking down the muzzle of a revolver in the steady hand of a horseman beside the wheelers. "Will you step down for a moment, driver?" asked the gentleman on horse-

Jim replied that he was just thinking of getting down, as he was tired of sit-ting. I followed him and took my place beside him in time to see the other passengers descend one by one from the inside of the coach with their hands above PR. W. A. PHILLIPS -Office hours, 2 to 5 P. were but two of the road agents. While one of them relieved the passengers of their weapons and all articles of value the other was in the front boat of the stage securing the treasure box.

When the first robber came opposite to Jim, he drew back in surprise, ex-claiming, "Well, I'll be hanged!" For a second only he was off his guard, but that brief space of time was a fatal one. A pistol cracked, and he fell shot through the head. "Bang, crack!" went two more shots.

Both took effect. The second road agent rocled and fell from the boot of the stage, and Jim was lying beside the first robber. It was the big six shooter of the man on the stage that had answered Jim's first shot, and it was the crack of a derringer that had terminated the brief battle.

Jim was wounded in the log. A young doctor in the party stanched the flow of blood, and we proceeded on our way with the bodies of the two bandits thrown into the hind boat.

The shooting was shrouded in mystery so far as the passengers were concorned. They had seen Jim's six shooter taken from his holster by one of the bandits, after which a careful search had been made to see that he had no other weapon, but when we picked him up a derringer was clasped in either hand. The question was how had he managed to conceal them and bring them into use at such an opportune time? The mystery was solved when his clothing was removed at the hotel in Fairplay. Under his waistcoat was the wire and elastic poker holdout formerly belonging to the gentleman from Texas The nippers for holding the cards had been removed, and a circular clasp large enough to securely hold the handle of a of the dental parlors and succeeded the pratice of Dr. Fredrick, has permantly located in Seno. and can be found at his dental puriors, trivance originally belonged was in the hind boot. His surprise upon recognizing Jim accounted for his presence there.

Jim's leg was broken, and the doctor informed him that when he recoverod that leg would be shorter than the other; that he would always limp when he walked.

"It's all my own fault," said Jim. "I don't see how you can make that

"Well, it was this way: When I let the derringers down into my hands, I calculated to shoot the man on the boot with the gun in my right hand an take the nighest feller with my left, but just then I recognized him as the gent I was mostly seekin after, a gent from Texas who skinned me out o' my pile with this yere hold out, an, doc, the tempta-tion was too great. I give it to him with my right, an it took me too long to get a head on the other one. But, say, doc, this science is a great thing. -Chicago Times.

Lighting Up In Parliament.

Every part of the house of commons is now lighted by electricity. In Cromwell's time the commons appear to have entertained strong objections to debates by artificial light. A Sir William Widdington brought in two caudles against the direction of the house and was sent to the Tower next morning. An interration to debate was sometimes caused by a motion that candles be brought in. A standing order was passed in 1717 empowering the sergeant-at-arms to oring in candles without any particular order. This order has been superseded by the instantaneous illumination of the house at the proper time, at first by gas and subsequently by electricity. -
